

I heard over the weekend about the decision of Sinclair Broadcasting to air an anti-Kerry "documentary" weeks before the election. This smacks of blatant disregard for the equal time laws of this country.

Furthermore, Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. But when large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the bottom line and less of what we need for our democracy. Instead of something produced at "News Central" far away, it's more important that we see real people from our own communities and more substantive news about issues that matter. It is also important that "Fair and Balanced" be more than just a trademark of a news company that clearly is not.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
